Professor, Doctor of Science

Abstract. Tourism industry can have a significant impact on regional and national economies. Due to the fragmented nature of the industry rational policy should to be developed in order to achieve productive results. Which potentially will positively contribute to the balanced development of the national and local economy. Naturally, to study such a complex issue, we have to take into consideration the main trends which exist at the international level as well. It's obvious, that the impact of the tourism industry on the economy is quite fragmented. Tourism enhances the process of creation of working places, tax generation, development of adjacent sectors. The system of the tourism industry can be considered as a platform, which accelerates activities in economically depressive regions and tourist destinations. The role of SMEs in the tourism industry are crucial, which means, that SMEs can be considered as an important generator for the regional and national economy. It should be mentioned, that small and medium enterprises are more flexible and open to meet the market opportunities. As practice confirms there is no single recipe that can be taken into consideration by the different countries. This article aims to examine how the tourism industry can promote balanced growth of local economic activities through the prism of small and medium-size enterprises. Furthermore, the research paper focuses on the study of the developing trend of small and medium entrepreneurship in the tourism and hospitality industry in Georgia.
