

JEAN MONNET CHAIR

UEUPE

ILI, TSU

FINAL REPORT

GENERAL INFORMATION

---

Title: Understanding EU Policy for Equality

Programme: EPLUS

DG/Agency: EACEA

Abstract:

The UEUPE project contributed to increased knowledge and capacity of youth and academia on European standards of equality, tolerance, and accommodation of diversities through academic discourse and information-sharing via teaching/learning and research-oriented activities, thereby counteracting misconceptions about EU values. UEUPE was an academic response to existing challenges, aiming to transform the situation by filling in the existing knowledge gaps and thereby counteracting misconceptions about the EU values by producing sustainable effects in the long run. UEUP served primarily the TSU academic community but also reached out to colleagues and students from other HEIs and targeted media professionals responsible for transferring information to the general public. Specific objectives of the Jean Monnet Chair included:

Upgraded curricula of BA and MA programmes of International Law at TSU to incorporate new/modified courses/topics related to EU Integration and equality policy with reference to minority rights protection in Georgia, and offered these courses to other law students and/or students of other disciplines (humanities, STEM). Created publications for disseminating information about EU and related anti-discrimination standards: these included a research publication in the format of the book, "European Union and Protection of the Rights of the persons belonging to national minorities," used both as a didactic guide in Georgian language and as a reference book for the interested public, along with other information publications such as leaflets, brochures, and press releases. Promoted research and debate on the topic of European standards on equality and multiculturalism by creating a space for dialogue between youth, academic community, and policy makers in the context of EU-Georgia relations discourse. Increased resilience to information manipulation through increased awareness of relevant professional groups.

Total Number of Students: 376

Doctoral Thesis/Seminars

---

PhD students had prepared comprehensive research papers on the intricate subject of EU law and standards, with a particular emphasis on the critical issues of equality and combating hate speech.

These research papers delved into the complexities of the legal framework, dissecting the various aspects of EU law that pertain to equality and the fight against hate speech. The students meticulously analyzed the existing legislation, case law, and academic literature, aiming to shed light on the current state of affairs and propose potential improvements.

Topics of the doctoral seminar theses:

- 1.The role of international organizations monitoring system in the context of fulfillment the international obligations of the state;
- 2.Legal aspects of the correlation between international (universal/regional) standards of the protection of ethnic, linguistic and religious minorities and domestic legislation of Georgia;
- 3.Defending the ideals of freedom of expression and equality in the context of Covid 19;
- 4.National approaches of Western countries in response to "hate speech";
- 5.The influence of the EU Charter of Fundamental Rights on European Law;
- 6.The role of International organizations in promoting International Law;
- 7.Impact of the Judgments of the European Court of Human Rights and UN Treaty Bodies on Georgian Legislation and Practice;
- 8.Protection of Personal Data Under EU Charter of Fundamental Rights.

The Jean Monnet Chair project application did not explicitly mention the inclusion of PhD students; however, it has since welcomed two students into our PhD program. These individuals are currently working on theses that align with the project's objectives:

- Impact of EU Law on the Georgian National Legal System
- Theoretical and Practical Aspects of the Rule of Law under Article 2 of the TEU

These additions to the program underscore the project's commitment to fostering academic growth and research in areas pertinent to its mission.

Trainings for Journalists

A training module developed on EU standards of equality, multiculturalism, and addressing hate speech for the training of journalists was developed. The training module methodology was tailored to fit the interests of the specific target group, and it consisted of 10 sessions. These sessions covered various aspects, including legal concepts, applicable terminology, and specific cases of individual and organizational success stories that showcased EU support and its positive impact. The training module addressed key points, such as the challenges media faced when dealing with EU-related issues, reporting on European Union values related to anti-discrimination regulations, and how to measure freedom of speech and handle hate speech. Role-play scenarios were elaborated for training, focusing on challenges in covering EU-related issues in media and pitching EU stories to skeptical audiences. The training aimed to increase participants' knowledge of EU-Georgia relations, promote quality journalism, and provide media professionals with tools to recognize the fundamental rights angle during news coverage.

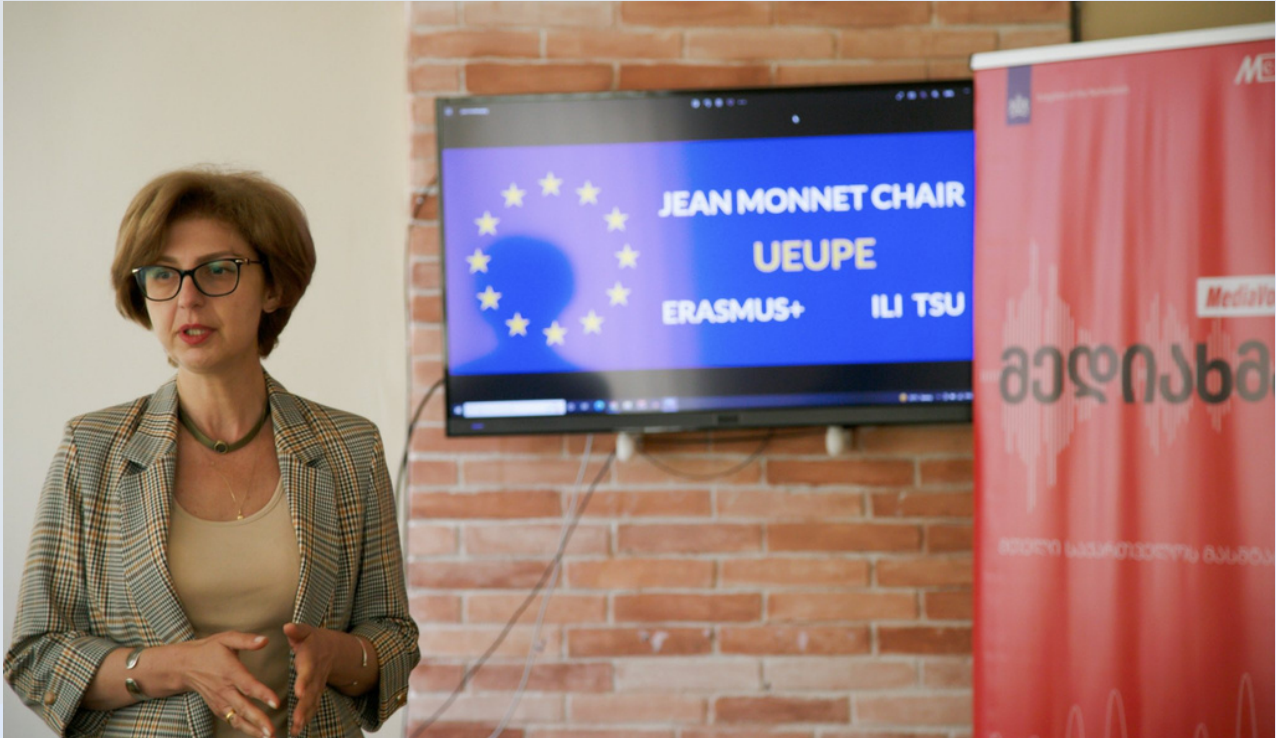

The training sessions were carried out in partnership with Media Voice, a renowned Georgian NGO dedicated to promoting media freedom. With Media Voice training sessions were conducted in 5 different regions of Georgia:

1. Tbilisi;
2. Adjara;
3. Samtskhe – Javakheti;
4. Kakheti;
5. Shida Kartli;

For each training session, journalists from both the national and regional levels were carefully selected, and the sessions were designed to span 1.5 days. The training sessions utilized a variety of instruments and methods to ensure their effectiveness. These included interactive workshops, multimedia presentations, group discussions, case studies, role-play exercises, and expert-led lectures.

These diverse tools were employed to engage participants, enhance their understanding, and facilitate practical skill development during the training sessions. These diverse tools were employed to engage participants, enhance their understanding, and facilitate practical skill development during the training sessions.
